Insights For Selling To Jerod

👉 During A Call Or A Meeting

DO's

- Ask them at the end if they see a strong value prop in your product; expect an honest answer
- During followups, use phone or text if needed, they should be fine
- Come across as a trustworthy professional and be respectful, they usually know their game

DONT's

- Don't get into pricing discussions early on, steer conversation towards proven results
- Don't take their patience for granted, avoid long-winding sermons
- Don't go over them unless you are left with no other option

👉 When Cold Calling

Insights

Pattern Interrupt: Confident style, with a mix of informality and formality gets their attention.

Pace: Speak slightly fast. Sound like a 'gets shit done' person.

Tone: Do not sound too eager, as if you have met a friend suddenly after a long time. Keep the tone calm but confident.

Tactics To Win: Strong words, focus on results, respectful confidence

Mistakes To Avoid: Apologizing, nervousness, information overload, social proof

Making The Ask: Confidently, ask for 10-15 minutes. Allude to the results and outcomes that are possible. They care about the ends more than the means.

Subconscious Driver: Results and outcomes are what matter to them. Any credible shot at getting results will appeal to them quickly.

Script

Greeting: Jerod, this is [user_fname] at [user_companynamewordstwowords].

Opener: In 30 seconds if I could share how 100% of your sellers could kick ass this year, can I go for it?

Introduction: We have built an AI that predicts exactly what would matter to your buyer before you even meet them.

Ask: Can I put 15 minutes on your calendar to show you how this changes outcomes for you?

Close: [time1] on [date1] sounds good? Or would you prefer [time2] on [date2]? And [prospect_email] works well?
